Resource of the Month:

Podcast episode- Turning Teaching into Scholarship with Dr. Mike Fitch, MD, PhD

This month's resource of the month offers a way to look into your own teaching and pivoting what you learn to produce scholarship. This podcast episode provides an overview of different frameworks and models of scholarship through which to approach writing about teaching in scholarship, best practices and tips when starting the research process, a list of resources, and much more. If you are unable to listen to the podcast, you may view the Show Notes for the podcast here, which breaks down the key points that was discussed in the podcast episode as well as some key takeaways.

New Resources

Please join us for an online screening of the documentary Open Season: Racism and Health Disparities, the Two Deadliest Disease in America. This film is designed to shed light on the current state of emergency and inspire people to go beyond their perceived limitations and become more active participants in what the future of America can be. We cannot go backwards to the old normal. The film will be followed by a live roundtable featuring several of the most dynamic Surgeons General of the United States as they discuss the problem of racial inequity in healthcare and how it can be addressed.

For more information, please contact Dr. Lisa McBride at lisa.mcbride@tcu.edu or Alexandra Gruner at assistant@uruglobal.org.
